OUTLOOK

Short term outlook

- The threat in Benghazi is assessed to have increased following the detonation of two VBIEDs on January 23 and the subsequent revenge executions by Major Mahmoud al-Warfali of the LNA Special Forces on January 24. An arrest warrant issued against Warfali could also result in internal tensions within the LNA.
- Tensions remain in Tajura / Suq al-Juma. Groups opposing RDF are consolidating under a new unified Tajura Battalion. The area remains calm at present, but the underlying issues remain unresolved with negotiations continuing and there remains the potential for further clashes.
- Tensions are building in Zawiyah, and there is a heightened risk of clashes among militia groupings as pressure from Jweli, who has now moved into Surman, mounts in the city.
- IS has mounted two attempted VBIED attacks in Tripolitania, including one in Tripoli. Both attempts failed; however, they may indicate a change in strategy by the terrorist group. Both devices were to be remotely detonated and targeted against security forces.

Medium to long term outlook

- As political talks fail to find any meaningful agreements, the concept of fresh elections has begun to gain traction amongst the political establishment. Deep divisions remain amongst the various factions, and an election blueprint has yet to be agreed. A number of those supporting the idea do not necessarily support the notion of a democratic establishment but are looking to exploit elections in a bid to gain power. The general population also remain skeptical of the political process and remain unclear what they would be voting for, highlighting the lack of structure and agreements currently around the process. The elections will trigger further posturing and maneuvering from various factions.
- IS continues to become bolder, mounting hit and run attacks against security forces and critical national infrastructure. They are also conducting criminal activity to raise funds and to help supply the group. The terrorist organization is believed to be trying to rebuild its capability in Libya and manpower is reported to be heading to the south of the country. IS will continue to benefit from the lack of political and security unity in Libya and may look to establish a fresh alliance with other extremist groups like al-Qaeda.

SIGNIFICANT EVENTS

Governance

- The Libyan Foreign Minister Mohammed Sayala has stated that the Libyan elections will take place in the fourth quarter of 2018. Previous reports had suggested they were to be held before the end of September.
- The PC held a series of meetings with various political factions to consult them on the cabinet reshuffle and the expansion of the government this week. The PC also held a meeting to discuss the security situation in general including measures to secure the capital.
- A vote in the Italian parliament over their military presence in Libya has caused controversy. The Italian embassy was forced to deny that the vote had been centered on increasing their military presence. Despite the denials, various factions have exploited the issue to pressure Rome.
- Mayors of 109 municipalities have threatened to declare civil disobedience and form a national government if “political division continues.” In a final statement from the first forum of municipalities held this week in Shahat, the mayors stated that the UN Envoy must speed up the ending of the political deadlock and that the HCS and HoR must end the current political division and form a unity government.
- The German Embassy has stated its intent to reopen its embassy in Tripoli and will provide support to the upcoming elections.
- Black market currency traders were offering as little as 4.5 dinars to the dollar this week compared to around nine at the beginning of the year.

Security

- A coordinated VBIED attack took place in Benghazi killing nearly 40 people and wounding a further 80 on January 23. The attacks have yet to be claimed by any group. The following day, Special Forces commander Mahmoud al-Warfali publically executed ten prisoners accused of terrorism at the site of the attacks.

January 26, 2018

- On January 24, MSCD announced that they had dismantled an LNA sleeper cell which was planning attacks inside the city. The following day, they executed three men.
- Ghanaian security forces announced on January 15 that they had arrested three men in possession of seven HGs and other explosives with the intention of carrying out a terrorist type attack in Ghana. All three men are returnees from Libya, with one reported to have links to IS.
- Negotiations are having some success at a local level in Tajura and Suq al-Juma following the clashes at Matiga Airport on January 15, however, the militias involved remain deeply opposed to each other both politically and religiously. Opposition to RDF and the GNA is consolidating under a new 'unified Tajura Battalion.' The battalion is to include LIFG supporters from Zuwara, Ajaylat, Zawiyah, Gharyan, Tajura, Msallata, Zliten, and Misrata.
- The LNA has carried out another airstrike against a JEM convoy in Kufra. The airstrike was part of Operation Desert Fury which is primarily aimed at JEM but is also to be extended to include the targeting of robbers and human traffickers.
- On January 20, the Zuwara Security Directorate visited various locations in Abu Kammash to arrest smugglers. They have also targeted the sale of fuel in unauthorized locations and have stated they will arrest anyone connected to the trade, including Tunisians.
- The minister of education's convoy was shot at in Bani Waled during the morning of January 24. There were no casualties, and the minister blamed a small number of youths in the area. He was quick to state that the attack did not represent the city and that he would wait on the outskirts until the end of the day to allow security and social groups to "contain the issue." He later moved to Tarhunah to finish his meetings.

Migration Crisis

- The Libyan Navy rescued 250 migrants from rubber dinghies north of Mellita and north of Zuwara at the start of the week. The Navy described the boats as 'worn out.'
- A video, allegedly showing migrants being tortured in Libya has gone 'viral.' Migrants were shown being whipped while their captors demanded 120,000 Sudanese pounds, the equivalent of USD 17,000. Migrants were forced to ring home and ask their families to send money for their release.
- Following the release of the video, security forces in Sirte, supported by RDF in Tripoli, arrested four men on suspicion of torturing migrants on video in an effort to extort money from their families in Sudan.

Travel

- Matiga Airport in Tripoli partially reopened on January 21 however normal operations have yet to resume fully. Discussions have been held regarding the possibility of opening Tripoli International Airport temporarily to help increase capacity.
- Vice President of the GNA Ahmed Mateig has met with the Vice Prime Minister of Turkey to discuss the return of Turkish airliners to Libya. Turkish Airlines suspended their flights in January 2015 due to the "lack of security at Libyan airports." The meeting comes days after nine aircraft were damaged during fighting at Matiga airport in Tripoli.
- At the start of the week, the head of the fuel crisis committee in Tripoli said that the lack of tankers arriving in Zawiyah, Tripoli, and Misrata, as well as the fuel driver's strike, had contributed to the fuel shortage in the west. He admitted that the supplies being delivered to filling stations were not enough. Later in the week, the oil tanker, Anwar al-Khaleej, docked at Tripoli port with 34 million liters of fuel which seemed to have a positive effect in the capital.
- The first flight into Tamanhint airport after its re-opening arrived on January 24 from Benina Airport in Benghazi.
- Staff at Misrata Port have gone on an open-ended strike over "financial and administrative corruption" in the management of the port authority.

Oil and Gas

- The NOC has set its crude allocations for 2018 and the contract was signed the week starting January 22.
- As-Sarah oilfield has reopened following a blockade which began in November 2017. Two wells began pumping on January 21 with production expected to reach 55,000bpd by January 22. The blockade has cost the country $281million, according to the NOC. Mustafa Sanalla, head of the NOC, has stated that it was a "humiliating setback for the parallel NOC which seeks to gain control over the production and sale of Libyan oil." Just days later, the Jikharra municipal council claimed that if a number of demands were not met by March, they would close the field again.

January 26, 2018

- Operations have resumed at the Zueitina gas plant. The plant will receive 8,000 bpd from Abu Attifel. The plant used to receive nearly 28,000bpd prior to its closure in July 2013.
- A “black cloud” which had affected Ajdabiya, was reported to have cleared by the end of the week after the source of the emission was stopped on January 21.

LATEST DEVELOPMENTS

Governance

On January 17, the Italian Parliament ratified a proposal, tabled by Prime Minister Paolo Gentiloni and approved by the Council of Ministers in December 2017, to deploy a number of Italian armed forces on separate missions across North Africa. The planned deployment includes a 470 strong contribution to a US and French Mission in Niger, 60 to the NATO mission in Tunisia and an estimated extra 30 personnel to join the 370 strong Italian contingent in Libya.

The HoR National Defense and Security Committee immediately responded with statement (issued on January 18) condemning the decision to send more troops to Libya as a clear violation of the country’s sovereignty. The following day, the GNA Foreign Ministry requested an official clarification from the Italian Embassy regarding the exact nature, size, disposition and mission of any new forces that may be sent to Libya.

The Italian embassy immediately denied accusations of adventurism and neo-colonialism, tweeting on January 18 “more inaccurate information circulated in the news media regarding the vote of the Italian parliament yesterday. In fact, nothing has changed on the ground. Cooperation between Italy and Libya remains based on friendship and full respect for Libya sovereignty.”

January 26, 2018

Security

At approximately 2015hrs on January 23, a VBIED detonated outside the Bayaat al-Radwan Mosque in Salmani, Benghazi. Three people were killed and six wounded as they left the mosque after evening prayers. As crowds gathered and first responders arrived on the scene, a secondary device on the opposite side of the road detonated approximately 18 minutes later, inflicting far higher casualties. At least three high ranking LNA commanders were killed or injured in the attacks. Ahmed Fitouri, an LNA commander within the investigations department, was killed while the head of the counter-espionage department of the Libyan Intelligence Service, Brigadier General Mahdi al-Falah, was wounded.

The day following the attacks, Special Forces Commander, Major Mahmoud al-Warfali, lined up ten prisoners, knelt them down, and publicly shot them outside the Bayaat al-Radwan Mosque in front of a jubilant crowd and cameras. The prisoners, from Gernada prison, were all accused of terrorism and are believed to have been arrested at various times during the Battle for Benghazi.
